I once heard an astronaut describe his trip to space. At first he saw individual countries, then continents, bound by oceans. When he went high enough, he could see only one world. Do we all need to go to the moon to understand that we live together in one interconnected world where peace can be found?¹

I. Introduction: The Four Motivations of this Essay

This essay has four motivations: three smooth-flowing ones, and an angry one.

First, it flows smoothly from the central arguments and theses of my book, Kant, Agnosticism, and Anarchism: A Theological-Political Treatise, co-written with Andrew Chapman and Addison Ellis.

Second, it flows equally smoothly from my intellectual and emotional engagement with three excellent recent books on altruism and utopianism: Rebecca Solnit's A Paradise

¹ A. N'Simbo, "Forced From Home Launches in the Northeast," ALERT: Medecins Sans Frontieres/Doctors Without Borders 17, 4 (2016): 12-13, at p. 12.

Built in Hell, Larissa MacFarquhar's Strangers Drowning, and Rutger Bregman's Utopia for Realists.

Third, it also flows smoothly, although somewhat more negatively, from my critical engagement with Peter Singer's truly excellent but in certain important ways, I think, philosophically misguided recent book, One World Now, and correspondingly, from my wanting to provide a clearly-presented, well-worked-out anti-utilitarian, principled non-consequentialist, existential Kantian cosmopolitan anarchist alternative to it, while also remaining broadly sympathetic with Singer's globalist ethical and political orientation.

Fourth and finally, the angry motivation.

To be quite frank, this essay was also inspired by an intense personal, moral, political, and spiritual rage about

- the media-driven Punch-and-Judy show that masqueraded as the 2016 United States of America Presidential campaign, and, as a direct consequence of that,
- the election of the greedy, ruthless, nativist, bigoted, demagogue billionaire Donald Trump as President of the USA, starting in 2017.

Trump received 46.3% of the popular vote, and 304 Electoral College votes.

As I will demonstrate, however, for most of those people the very act of supporting Trump, and voting for Trump, was what the Brazilian radical philosopher of education Paulo Freire, in his highly influential 1968 book, The Pedagogy of the Oppressed, with incisive, prescient moral and political insight and aptness, called internalizing your oppressor: kissing the foot of the tyrannical person who is stepping on your head.

Therefore, in addition to presenting and defending the idea of Utopia Now, this essay is also intended to be

- a radical philosophical contribution towards helping these Trump-supporting people in particular, and everyone else in general, including myself, to liberate themselves and ourselves from this contemporary situation of national, international and global oppression,
- by daring to think and act for themselves and for ourselves, that is, by collectively developing what Freire also so very aptly called a critical consciousness.

Solnit, MacFarquhar, Bregman, & Me, Sharply Over Against Singer

Solnit's book very compellingly describes how ordinary people frequently become active altruists and temporarily create real-world utopias in the aftermath of disasters.

MacFarquhar's book brilliantly explores the ethics and existential psychology of real-world altruistic "sinner-saints."

And here are Bregman's ideas in a nutshell.

- Universal Basic Income (UBI) means that every adult person gets a decent living income (say, $25,000.00 USD per year) with no further requirements and no strings attached.
- Wherever UBI has been tried in the past, it has had good all-around benefits for everyone involved.
- UBI could be easily funded by rich countries, e.g., by progressive taxes on capital accumulation, large incomes, money transactions, and money-managing, and by sharp reductions in military spending (especially in the USA).
- UBI would end world poverty, if implemented worldwide.
- The UBI idea primes us to think seriously about the nature and purpose of work, and more specifically about why anyone should be doing what the political anthropologist David Graeber aptly calls bullshit jobs (i.e., jobs that are inherently uncreative and meaningless, and also unproductive and useless for anyone other than the job-holder, even if lucrative) if they don't have to.
- The primary barriers to UBI are (i) cognitive illusions about poverty (in particular, the classical invidious, ideologically-driven distinction between "deserving" and "undeserving" poor) and (ii) neoliberal ideology.

Bregman also has some very interesting and important—although less well-worked-out—ideas and arguments about universal open borders (UOB) and a 15-hour workweek (FHW).

In what follows in this essay, building and elaborating on Hanna, Chapman, and Ellis, and on Solnit, MacFarquhar, and Bregman, but also sharply over against Singer's act-utilitarian, consequentialist ethical commitments, I defend a five-part, collective altruist, utopian, anti-utilitarian, principled non-consequentialist, existential Kantian cosmopolitan anarchist proposal.

The U-Zone

By The U-Zone, I mean an empirical test of the five-part collective altruist, utopian, anti-utilitarian, principled non-consequentialist, existential Kantian cosmopolitan anarchist proposal, by means of a large-scale, real-world pilot project consisting of a North and Central American Utopian Zone comprising Canada, the USA, and Mexico.

The U-Zone pilot project would start with a process of radical political change in the USA, then include Canada and Mexico.

Obviously, not only would The U-Zone pilot project require intensive and extensive advance-planning, but also every year, year after year, the existing conditions, effects, and implications of the U-Zone pilot project would have to be carefully studied by large teams of well-trained experts in Canada, the USA, and Mexico, working together; and many important fine-tunings, refinements, reforms, or repairs would have to be made along the way.

Assuming that all goes well, however, then the success of The U-Zone will show the rest of the world what can actually be done, and as a natural consequence, other u-zones will begin to proliferate around the world, until finally the global implementation of the five-part collective altruist, utopian, anti-utilitarian, principled non-consequentialist, existential Kantian cosmopolitan anarchist proposal is complete.

To give it a handy label, I will call this five-part proposal, together with The U-Zone pilot project, and its eventual extension to global implementation, Utopia Now.

In other words, the creation of Utopia Now will be bottom-up, dynamic, and (d)evolutionary, not top-down, externally-imposed, and revolutionary.

Starting with the USA, here is what I am proposing.

1. Universal Basic Income (UBI):

- Anyone 21 years of age or over and living permanently in the USA, who has a personal yearly income of $50,000 USD or less, and who is capable of requesting their UBI, would receive $25,000 USD per year, with no strings attached.

2. A 15-Hour Workweek for Understaffed Non-Bullshit Jobs (FHW-for-UNBJs):

- Anyone 18 years of age or older who is living permanently in the USA, who has completed a high school education, and is mentally and physically capable of doing a job, would be offered an eco-job, paying a yearly wage of $25,000.00 USD, for fifteen hours of work (three 5-hour days) per week.

So anyone 21 years of age or older with a high-school degree and who is also mentally and physically capable of working, would have a guaranteed yearly income of at least $50,000 USD if they chose to do an eco-job.

The rationale behind the three-year gap between (i) being offered an eco-job at 18 and (ii) beginning to receive their UBI at 21, is that every young adult who has finished high school will have the option of pursuing three years of part-time or full-time higher education for its own sake after high school, before making longer-term decisions about what, in section IV, I will call job-work and life-work.

3. Universal Free Healthcare (UFH):

- Every human person living permanently in the USA will receive free lifelong healthcare.

4. 2-Phase Universal Open Borders (2P-UOB):

- Phase 1: Starting in 2021, there will be universal open borders with Canada and Mexico, and everyone who moves across those borders and then claims residence in the USA, will receive temporary or permanent residence in the USA and also full membership in the system of UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, and UFH in the USA, with the precise number of new temporary or permanent residents to depend on the current availability of (i) adequate funding for UBI, eco-jobs, and UFH, and (ii) adequate living accommodation, in the USA, provided that all new residents also fully respect the human dignity of everyone else in the USA and elsewhere in the world.
- Phase 2: Also starting in 2021, the USA, Canada, and Mexico will collectively form a Global Refugee Consortium (GRC), with three-way open borders to any political refugee, economic refugee, or asylum seeker from anywhere in the world (aka "global refugees"), who will receive temporary or permanent residence in the USA, Canada, or Mexico, and also full membership in the system of UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, and UFH in the three GRC countries, with the precise number of new temporary or permanent residents, and the precise distribution of new residents among the three members of the GRC, to depend on the current availability of (i) funding for UBI, eco-jobs, and UFH , and (ii) adequate living accommodation, in the three GRC countries, provided that all new residents also fully respect the human dignity of everyone else in the GRC and elsewhere in the world.

5. Universal No-Guns (UNG):

- No one in the USA, including police, internal security forces of all kinds, armies, and intelligence forces of all kinds, has the moral right to possess or use guns of any kind, for any purpose whatsoever, because the primary function of guns is coercion, and coercion is immoral.
- UNG would be implemented by repealing the Second Amendment to the US Constitution in 2021 and then universally banning the possession or use of guns thereafter.

I'm assuming that Universal Public Education (UPE)—universal free access for all human persons of any age to good public education up to the end of high school—already exists in most countries, and needs no further justification.

Where UPE does not already exist, it would automatically become a necessary part of the Utopia Now package, thereby making it a six-part package.

The radical reform of education at colleges and universities, Higher Education Without Credentialing (HEWC), is a necessary but also secondary element of Utopia Now that will be discussed separately elsewhere.

In any case, my threefold contention in this essay is

- first, that implementing UBI + FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs + UFH + 2P-UOB + UNG firstly in the USA, secondly in The U-Zone, and then thirdly across the entire, world, aka Utopia Now, not only morally and politically should be done but also realistically can begin to happen immediately,
- second, that our primary motivation for Utopia Now should be spiritual in nature, and in particular, a rage for humanity, and

- third, that real, serious contemporary philosophers both inside and outside professional academic philosophy not only morally and politically should but also realistically can contribute directly and substantially to Utopia Now.

II. Collective Altruism

Hobbesians and neo-Hobbesians are not merely mistaken, but in fact dangerously, spectacularly wrong that all human beings are egoistic and mutually antagonistic by nature, neurobiology, or inevitably by culture.

On the contrary, all human persons are fully capable of altruism, kindness, and mutual aid, and the Hobbesian or neo-Hobbesian thesis is nothing but a cognitive illusion and cultural myth self-servingly used to justify personal egoism/self-interest or authoritarian oppression and tyranny, whether by pharaohs, kings, popes, emperors, Czars, military dictators, fascist governments, communist governments, or the elected governments of neoliberal democracies.

Another version of the same cognitive illusion and cultural myth is the clearly false thesis that if everyone always pursued egoistic ends, then they would be better off than if not everyone did or no one did.

That's because the egoist always has sufficient reason to cheat, maim, or murder his competitors for limited resources and rewards if no one else is watching.

Moreover, the classic claim that every apparently altruistic choice or action satisfies some deeper egoistic imperative or urge is patently question-begging and sophistical, since it refuses to tell us what could ever count as acceptable evidence in favor of altruism, by presupposing that every item of apparent evidence for altruism is reinterpreted to confirm egoism.

Altruism, it should also be noted, isn't merely self-sacrificing choices or action for the sake of others, but also idealistic non-egoistic, non-hedonistic, non-instrumental, non-consequentialist choice or action of any kind.

By collective altruism I mean an emergent property of human or otherwise animal mindedness, that is constituted by the practical capacities and practical activities of a group of (e.g.) people as a group, especially including group deliberation and participatory decision-making.

More specifically, collective altruism is a relatively high level of altruistic group activity that is not a function of high average levels of altruism across individual group members, but instead is produced by effective collaborative interaction within the group.

In other words, and to put it simply, you don't have to be an all-star altruist yourself in order to engage in highly successful team altruism, aka collective altruism.

Utopia Now is therefore a five-part, collective altruist, utopian, anti-utilitarian, principled non-consequentialist, existential Kantian cosmopolitan anarchist project that is grounded on a thoroughgoing rejection of the Hobbesian or neo-Hobbesian myth and the self-serving, sophisticated egoism and many-faced authoritarianism and tyranny lying behind it.

III. Poverty, Economic Oppression, and Universal Basic Income

Poverty and Economic Oppression in the USA

According to the US Census Bureau Report on Income and Poverty in the USA for 2015, in 2015, the median household income in the USA was $56,516 USD.

This means that 50% of all households had an income below $56,516 USD.

In 2015, the official poverty rate in was 13.5 percent, and there were 43.1 million people in poverty.

Do you really think that, over the next 4 or 8 years, President-Elect Donald Trump and all the other rich people in the Trump governing elite are going to make economic life better for you, for those people with household incomes under $56,000, and for the 43 million people living in poverty?

Hell no. Of course not.

It's not going to get significantly better and will probably get significantly worse, especially if you are black, Hispanic, a single mother of any race, or a white person who lives in a non-urban area.

Now let's call all those people with household incomes under $56,000 USD or living in poverty, economically oppressed people.

How would you like to be an economically oppressed person?

Or perhaps you already are one. How does it feel?

Like a sickness-unto-death, right?

UBI to the Rescue

According to my Universal Basic Income (UBI) proposal:

- Anyone 21 years of age or over who is living permanently in the USA, who has a personal yearly income of $50,000 USD or less, and who is capable of requesting their UBI, would receive $25,000 USD per year, with no strings attached.

In order to receive your UBI, you would have to request it.

No one would receive a UBI who hadn't requested it.

Anyone could voluntarily forego their UBI for any given year, just by not requesting it.

Individuals whose personal income is $50,000 USD or less, but whose personal worth is far in excess of that, would be officially asked to donate their UBI to the collective good.

If desired, one could also have his/her name publicly listed as a conscientious UBI-donor.

Every year, there would be a single-day national holiday devoted to UBI celebrations, and especially to thanking conscientious UBI-donors.

We could call it UBI-Day.

The UBI would be indexed to the cost of living (COL), so that if the COL went up, then every UBI recipient would also receive a yearly Cost of Living Adjustment (COLA) in addition to their basic UBI.

Various experimental versions of the UBI proposal have been tried in the past, with significant benefits for all concerned, and currently, several different experimental versions of UBI are being tried in Europe.

One Obvious Objection to UBI, and a Vigorous Reply

One obvious objection to UBI is that it would be too expensive, hence couldn't be afforded by the USA.

But I want to reply, vigorously, that that's clearly not only false, but also serious bullshit.

Here's why.

According to my proposal, we set the UBI at $25,000 USD per year.

In 2016, there are 226 million eligible voters in the USA; and since 2012, 16 million people have reached the age of 18.

Let's conservatively estimate, then, that roughly 10 million of those are between 18 and 20.

So there are roughly 216 million possible UBI recipients in the USA right now.

Of those roughly 216 million people, 111.5 million have yearly personal incomes of 50K USD or less.

Therefore the total cost of UBI for the USA right now, if everyone who is 21 years or older, who has a personal income of $50,000.00 USD or less, and who is capable of requesting a UBI, actually did request-and-receive their UBI, would be at most 2.8 trillion USD per year.

To put that in perspective, the 2015 US military defense budget alone was 585 billion USD, i.e., more than half a trillion.

Since UBI would replace social security and many other basic assistance programs, all the money currently raised in social security taxes or spent on other basic assistance programs per year could be used for UBI, in addition to progressive taxes on capital accumulation, high incomes, money transfer, and money management, and also sharp reductions in military spending reduction.

Hence UBI is easily affordable, and those who claim it isn't, are trying to sell you down the river.

Another Perhaps Even More Obvious Objection to UBI, and an Equally Vigorous Reply

Another perhaps even more obvious objection to UBI is that it would turn people into lazy bums, aka slackers, unwilling ever to work for a living.

That is clearly false and serious bullshit too.

As I will argue in the next section on FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, by nature, people want to do creative, meaningful, productive, useful things with their lives.

Moreover, they do not want to be coerced or nudged, or otherwise told what to do.

So almost all UBI recipients will take their UBI together with their FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, and do the things they think are most important.

My estimate is that at most 10% of the people who request their UBIs will misuse it or squander it.

But in any case, the precise normal rate of misuse or squandering can also be tested in small-scale UBI + FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs pilot programs.

Now think of all the well-off people who are currently misusing or squandering their incomes!

It is obvious that the rate of misuse or squandering among UBI-recipients would be significantly lower than that.

This is because the moral values of autonomy and freedom-from-oppression under the UBI plan are non-denumerably infinitely great.

Therefore, with their UBI, people will be greatly more creative, meaning-making, productive, and useful than they were without it.

To summarize so far, here are three decisive reasons for adopting and implementing my UBI proposal.

First, if this UBI proposal were adopted and implemented, then it would end poverty in the USA, forever.

Second, if this UBI proposal were adopted and implemented, then it would end economic oppression in the USA, forever.

Third, if this UBI proposal were adopted and implemented then everyone living permanently in the USA would be liberated from the fear of poverty and economic oppression, forever.

In other words, no one living permanently in the USA would have to feel that their life is like a sickness-unto-death for those reasons, ever again.

IV. The Job Dilemma, a 15-Hour Workweek for Understaffed Non-Bullshit Jobs, and Eco-Jobs

The mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation. What is called resignation is confirmed desperation.... A stereotyped but unconscious despair is concealed even under what are called the games and amusements of mankind. There is no play in them, for this comes after work.²

What is a Shit Job?

By a shit job, I mean either a job that pays well but is meaningless and pointless, and also unproductive and useless for anyone other than the job-holder (aka a bullshit job) or a job that is bad for any other reason, e.g., it's boring, dangerous, demeaning, otherwise low-status, grossly underpaid, etc. etc.

Simply put, a shit job is a job you would quit right now, if you could afford it.

So the criterion of whether you now have a shit job or not is this:

Would you quit your job right now, if you could afford it?

If so, then you have a shit job.

Is this your fault?

No, it isn't your fault.

And here's why.

The Job Dilemma

In The Age of Trump — that is, over the next 4 to 8 years — most people living in the USA are going to face the following dilemma, The Job Dilemma:

either you have no job, or else you hate your job because it's a shit job.

The reasons for this are simple.

² H.D. Thoreau, Walden.

First, in November 2016, according to US Bureau of Labor Statistics, the unemployment rate was 4.6 percent, with 7.4 million unemployed people actively looking for jobs, plus 2 million long-term unemployed people.

That's almost 10 million unemployed people.

Do you think that those people are happy or unconcerned about being unemployed?

If you do, then you're in the grip of a self-serving cognitive illusion.

Try it sometime, for a year or 2, and then tell me what you think.

Unemployed people hate being unemployed, like a sickness-unto-death, just as people who are in poverty or otherwise economically oppressed hate their situation like a sickness-unto-death.

Let's assume that the roughly-10-million-unemployed-people number is a benchmark for the next 4 years.

This means that, for the next four years, roughly 10 million people are always going to be unemployed and hate their own lives like a sickness-unto-death.

Second, over the next four or eight years, advances in technology are going to make a great many current jobs obsolete — e.g., driverless trucks.

Third, since many or even most people would quit their current job instantly if they could afford to, many or even most jobs are going to be shit jobs.

Now as I pointed out above, President-Elect Trump, who received 46.3% of the popular vote, is a billionaire—a greedy, ruthless, nativist, bigoted, demagogue billionaire.

Do you really think that, over the next 4 or 8 years, he and all the other rich people in the Trump governing elite are even going to attempt to fix The Job Dilemma?

Again, hell no. Of course not.

So, for as long as Trump is POTUS and nothing is done to fix The Job Dilemma, we're screwed.

Universal Basic Income and a 15-Hour Workweek for Understaffed Non-Bullshit Jobs, i.e, Eco-Jobs

According to the Universal Basic Income (UBI) proposal I spelled out and defended in section III:

- Anyone 21 years of age or over who has a personal yearly income of $50,000 USD or less, and is capable of requesting their UBI, would receive $25,000 USD per year, with no strings attached.

Now, over and above UBI, I am also proposing a 15-Hour Workweek for Understaffed Non-Bullshit Jobs (FHW-for-UNBJs), which says:

- Anyone 18 years of age or older who is living permanently in the USA, who has completed a high school education, and is mentally and physically capable of doing a job, would be offered an eco-job, paying a yearly wage of $25,000.00 USD, for fifteen hours of work (three 5-hour days) per week.

More precisely, then, high school graduates of 18 years of age or older would be offered an eco-job paying $25,000 per year, and, in addition, when they reached the age of 21, provided they were earning in total $50,000 USD per year or less, they would also receive another $25,000 as their UBI.

The rationale behind the three-year gap between (i) being offered an eco-job at 18 and (ii) beginning to receive their UBI at 21, is that every young adult who has finished high school will have the option of pursuing three years of part-time or full-time higher education for its own sake after high school, before making longer-term decisions about what, six sub-sections below, I will call job-work and life-work.

In any case, it would mean that anyone 21 years of age or older with a high-school degree and who is also mentally and physically capable of working, would have a guaranteed yearly income of at least $50,000 USD if they chose to do an eco-job.

Kantian Eco-Politics

What's so good about eco-jobs?

Here is a short, but I think decisive, non-utilitarian, non-consequentialist argument for eco-jobs, from the standpoint of a radical environmental philosophy I call Kantian eco-politics.

- As rational human animals, and real human persons, by means of natural piety we have reverence (Ehrfurcht) for nature and its proto-dignity.³
- But, as rational human animals and real human persons, we must also exit the state and statelike institutions in order to create and belong to a world-wide ethical community in which everyone sufficiently treats everyone else with respect for their human dignity, including alleviating or ending human oppression, mutual aid, and mutual kindness.⁴
- Therefore, we must simultaneously protect the natural world and systematically dismantle the state- and statelike- institutions and mechanisms that are damaging or destroying the natural environment, insofar as they oppress people.

Five Types of Eco-Jobs

According to my FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs proposal, there would be five types of eco-jobs.

1. eco-education (eco-ed) jobs: that is, jobs whose specific role is to provide help in currently under-staffed areas within the system of Universal Public Education (UPE),
2. eco-healthcare (eco-health) jobs: that is, jobs whose specific role is to provide help in currently under-staffed areas within the system of Universal Free Healthcare (UFH),
3. eco-protection (eco-pro) jobs: that is, jobs whose specific role is to provide help in currently under-staffed areas in (3i) urban-environmental clean-up and tending (including garbage collection, litter removal, recycling, public gardening, snow removal, etc.) and (3ii) natural-environmental clean-up and tending (including forestry and re-forestation, water pollution-clean up, industrial pollution clean-up, etc.)
4. eco-transportation (eco-trans) jobs: that is, jobs whose specific role is to provide help in currently under-staffed areas in the hybrid or all-electric car industry, and

5. eco-administration (eco-admin) jobs: that is, jobs whose specific role is to provide help in organizing, implementing, and running the system of eco-jobs.

The Requirements for an Eco-Job

According to my FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs proposal, there would be 6 individually necessary and jointly sufficient requirements for an eco-job.

- 1. If you want to own a vehicle other than a bicycle or other self-propelled machine, you either (1i) sell or trade in any gasoline-only vehicles you already own, in return for a free hybrid or all-electric car, or (1ii) if you do not already own a gasoline-only vehicle, then you receive a free hybrid or all-electric car.
- 2. If, by virtue of requirement 1, you do own a hybrid car, you agree to drive it according to a regular plan for modest gasoline consumption.
- 3. You agree to purchase and eat meat-products according to a regular plan for modest meat-consumption.
- 4. You have completed a high school education.
- 5. You are 18 years of age or older.
- 6. You are mentally and physically capable of doing your eco-job.

How Would the System of Eco-Jobs Be Implemented?

According to my FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs proposal, in the first six months of 2021, all (roughly ten million) unemployed people would be asked the following two-part question: do you meet the requirements for an eco-job, and if so and you were offered an eco-job, would you take it?

Let's call the number of unemployed people who could answer yes to both parts of that question, the New Jobs Number, aka the NJN.

Then, in the second six months of 2021 a total number of eco-jobs equal to the NJN would be created and offered to those unemployed people.

Also during 2021, the number of jobs made obsolete due to new technology would be calculated.

Let's call that number the Obsolete Jobs Number, aka the OJN.

And also during the first six months of 2021, everyone who has a job at that time will be asked the following question: if you were offered an eco-job starting in January 2022, would you quit your current job and take the eco-job?

Let's call the number of those who say yes to that question the Shit Jobs Number, aka the SJN.

Then, starting in 2022, the total number of eco-jobs that would be created and offered every year would be equal to the OJN + the SJN for the preceding year.

Marx's Theory of Labor and Alienation, Job-Work, and Life-Work

Here is Marx's theory of labor and alienation, in a Wiki-nutshell:

In a capitalist society, the worker's alienation from their humanity occurs because the worker can only express labour—a fundamental social aspect of personal individuality—through a private system of industrial production in which each worker is an instrument, a thing, and not a person; in the "Comment on James Mill" (1844) Marx explained alienation thus:

Let us suppose that we had carried out production as human beings. Each of us would have, in two ways, affirmed himself, and the other person. (i) In my production I would have objectified my individuality, its specific character, and, therefore, enjoyed not only an individual manifestation of my life during the activity, but also, when looking at the object, I would have the individual pleasure of knowing my personality to be objective, visible to the senses, and, hence, a power beyond all doubt. (ii) In your enjoyment, or use, of my product I would have the direct enjoyment both of being conscious of having satisfied a human need by my work, that is, of having objectified man's essential nature, and of having thus created an object corresponding to the need of another man's essential nature . . . Our products would be so many mirrors in which we saw reflected our essential nature.^[1]

In the Economic and Philosophic Manuscripts of 1844 (1927), ... Marx identified four types of alienation that occur to the worker labouring under a capitalist system of industrial production.^[2]

In the capitalist mode of production, the generation of products (goods and services) is accomplished with an endless sequence of discrete, repetitive, motions that offer the worker little psychological satisfaction for "a job well done". By means of commodification, the labour power of the worker is reduced to wages (an exchange value); the psychological estrangement (Entfremdung) of the worker results from the unmediated relation between his productive labour and the wages paid him for the labour. That division of labour, within the capitalist mode of production, further exploits the worker by limiting their Gattungswesen (species-essence)—the human being's power to determine the purpose to which the product (goods and services) shall be applied.... [C]apitalism remove[s] from the worker the right to exercise control upon the value and the effects of their own labour, which, in turn, robs the worker of the ability to either buy

(consume) the goods and services, or to receive the full value from the sale of the product. The alienation of the worker from the act of producing renders the worker unable to specialize in a type of productive labour, which is a psychologically satisfying condition; within an industrial system of production, social alienation reduces the worker to an instrument, to an object, and thus cannot productively apply every aspect of one's human nature.⁵

I am in substantial agreement with Marx's analysis of labor and alienation under capitalism, if, in an existential cosmopolitan Kantian anarchist way,⁶ we interpret Marx's notion of human species-essence as human dignity.

But I also think that Marx made two serious mistakes.

First, Marx mistakenly concentrated almost exclusively on the exploitation of workers.

On the contrary, he should have concentrated on the oppression of humanity, which is not only more fundamentally wrong, but also massively more widespread, than worker-exploitation alone.

Second, Marx was mistaken that human labor under capitalism is necessarily alienating.

On the contrary, capitalism per se,⁷ although it certainly has and certainly still does lead to the exploitation of workers and the alienation of their labor, is, as such, actually consistent with a realistic cosmopolitan altruistic utopian system in which human labor is not only not alienating, but in fact liberating, when human labor is re-conceived as human work from the standpoint of Utopia Now.

What is the Concept of Human Work?

From the standpoint of Utopia Now, this is the concept of human work:

- human work is any form of creative or productive rational human agency,
- every human worker is a real human person, inherently possessing human dignity, and not a mere instrument or a mere thing,
- there are two basic kinds of human work, namely job-work and life-work,

⁵ Wikipedia, "Marx's Theory of Alienation."

⁶ See note 4 above.

⁷ See, e.g., "Capitalism," Wikipedia, available online at URL = <<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Capitalism>>. As Jonathan Sperber rightly reminds us in his recent biography of Marx, Karl Marx: A Nineteenth-Century Life (New York: Liveright, 2013), p. xv, "what Marx meant by 'capitalism' was not the contemporary version of it, ... [and] the bourgeoisie Marx critically dissected was not today's class of global capitalists."

- job-work, in general, is whenever a human worker receives wages in return for creation or production,
- job-work, specifically according to FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, is the part-time (15 hours per week) means by which the person earns an adequate living-wage doing something productive and useful for humanity,
- life-work is some creative, meaningful activity (aka a project), or a series of such activities (aka projects), pursued as a full-time, or almost full-time, lifetime calling, and
- the basic function of job-work is to enable and support life-work, although one's job-work could also be chosen as one's life-work.

It is crucial to note that life-work is an exceptionally broad category, including anything from raising children or otherwise caring for other people, to carpentry and other sorts of craftsmanship, to playing games or sports, to making or performing music, to painting or sculpting, to writing literature of any kind, to making movies, to studying and writing history, to philosophy.

What is essential to life-work is that it involves creative, meaningful activity.

Therefore, life-work substantially overlaps with the category of human play, which is often falsely opposed to human work.

On the contrary, insofar as play is creative and meaningful, it can also be life-work.

Six Decisive Reasons for Implementing UBI and FHW-for-UNBJs/Eco-Jobs Together

First, under the system of UBI together with FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, no one who is capable of working and who wants to work will ever be unemployed again, forever.

Second, under the system of UBI together with FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, no one who is capable of working and who wants to work will ever have to take a shit job again, forever.

Third, under the system of UBI together with FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, The Job Dilemma would be fixed, forever.

Fourth, under the system of UBI together with FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, since there would be an initial set of eco-jobs created and offered in the second six months of 2021 equal to the New Jobs Number, then a further set of new eco-jobs equal to the Obsolete Jobs

Number + the Shit Jobs Number for 2021 created and offered in January 2022, and then a further set of new eco-jobs equal to the OJN + SJN for 2022 created and offered in January 2023, and so-on for subsequent years, then, year by year, there would be a significant reduction in greenhouse gas emissions in the USA, and, correspondingly significant progress would be made by the USA towards preventing future disasters of global climate change.

Fifth, therefore, under the system of UBI together with FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, every eco-job will by its very nature be a useful, productive, environmentally respectful job.

Sixth and finally, under the system of UBI together with FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, since the function of job-work is to enable and support life-work, the universal availability of eco-jobs will be in itself liberating for humanity.

V. Healthcare Hell and Universal Free Healthcare

Healthcare Hell in the USA

The United States life expectancy of 78.4 years at birth, up from 75.2 years in 1990, ranks it 50th among 221 nations, and 27th out of the 34 industrialized OECD countries, down from 20th in 1990.^{[5][6]} Of 17 high-income countries studied by the National Institutes of Health in 2013, the United States had the highest or near-highest prevalence of obesity, car accidents, infant mortality, heart and lung disease, sexually transmitted infections, adolescent pregnancies, injuries, and homicides. On average, a U.S. male can be expected to live almost four fewer years than those in the top-ranked country, though notably Americans aged 75 live longer than those who reach that age in other developed nations.^[7] A 2014 survey of the healthcare systems of 11 developed countries found the US healthcare system to be the most expensive and worst-performing in terms of health access, efficiency, and equity.^[8]

Gallup recorded that the uninsured rate among U.S. adults was 11.9% for the first quarter of 2015, continuing the decline of the uninsured rate outset by the Affordable Care Act.^[15] A 2004 Institute of Medicine (IOM) report said: “The United States is among the few industrialized nations in the world that does not guarantee access to health care for its population.” A 2004 OECD report said: “With the exception of Mexico, Turkey, and the United States, all OECD countries had achieved universal or near-universal (at least 98.4% insured) coverage of their populations by 1990.” Recent evidence demonstrates that lack of health insurance causes some 45,000 to 48,000 unnecessary deaths every year in the United States.^{[16][17]} In 2007, 62.1% of filers for bankruptcies claimed high medical expenses. A 2013 study found that about 25% of all senior citizens declare bankruptcy due to medical expenses, and 43% are forced to mortgage or sell their primary residence.^[18]

Of 17 high-income countries studied by the National Institutes of Health in 2013, the United States was at or near the top in infant mortality, heart and lung disease, sexually transmitted infections, adolescent pregnancies, injuries, homicides, and rates of disability. Together, such issues place the U.S. at the bottom of the list for life expectancy. On average, a U.S. male can be expected to live almost four fewer years than those in the top-ranked country.[7]

The U.S. Census Bureau reported that 49.9 million residents, 16.3% of the population, were uninsured in 2010 (up from 49.0 million residents, 16.1% of the population, in 2009).[24][25] According to the World Health Organization (WHO), the United States spent more on health care per capita ($7,146), and more on health care as percentage of its GDP (15.2%), than any other nation in 2008.[26] The United States had the fourth highest level of government health care spending per capita ($3,426), behind three countries with higher levels of GDP per capita: Monaco, Luxembourg, and Norway.[26] A 2001 study in five states found that medical debt contributed to 46.2% of all personal bankruptcies and in 2007, 62.1% of filers for bankruptcies claimed high medical expenses.[27] Since then, health costs and the numbers of uninsured and underinsured have increased.[28] A 2013 study found that about 25% of all senior citizens declare bankruptcy due to medical expenses.[18]

The U.S. pays twice as much as Canada yet lags behind other wealthy nations in such measures as infant mortality and life expectancy. Currently, the U.S. has a higher infant mortality rate than most of the world's industrialized nations.[nb 1][29] In the United States life expectancy is 42nd in the world, after some other industrialized nations, lagging the other nations of the G5 (Japan, France, Germany, U.K., U.S.) and just after Chile (35th) and Cuba (37th).[30]

Life expectancy at birth in the U.S., 78.49, is 50th in the world, below most developed nations and some developing nations. Monaco is first with 89.68. Chad is last with 48.69. With 72.4% Americans of European ancestry,[31] life expectancy is below the average life expectancy for the European Union.[32][33] The World Health Organization (WHO), in 2000, ranked the U.S. health care system as the highest in cost, first in responsiveness, 37th in overall performance, and 72nd by overall level of health (among 191 member nations included in the study).[34][35] In 2008 the Commonwealth Fund, an advocacy group seeking greater government involvement in US healthcare, then led by former Carter administration official Karen Davis,[36] ranked the United States last in the quality of health care among similar countries,[37] and notes U.S. care costs the most.[38]

United States ranks close to the bottom compared to other industrialized countries on several important health issues affecting mortality: low birth weight and infant mortality, injuries and murder, teen pregnancy and STDs, HIV and AIDS, deaths resulting from drug overdoses, obesity and diabetes, heart disease, COPD, and general disability.[39]

A 2004 Institute of Medicine (IOM) report said: "The United States is among the few industrialized nations in the world that does not guarantee access to health care for its population." [40] A 2004 OECD report said: "With the exception of Mexico, Turkey, and the United States, all OECD countries had achieved universal or near-universal (at least 98.4% insured) coverage of their populations by 1990." [41] The 2004 IOM report observed "lack of health insurance causes roughly 18,000 unnecessary deaths every year in the United States", [40] while a 2009 Harvard study conducted by co-founders of Physicians for a National Health

Program, a pro-single payer advocacy group, estimated that 44,800 excess deaths occurred annually due to lack of health insurance.^[42]⁸

WtF?

In view of the overwhelmingly obvious two-part fact that universal free healthcare, aka single payer healthcare, is not only the norm amongst industrialized countries, hence it could be easily afforded by the USA, but is also infinitely superior to the healthcare hell that exists in the USA, then I ask you: what the fuck?

Well, consider this:

Health care in the United States is provided by many distinct organizations.^[1] Health care facilities are largely owned and operated by private sector businesses. 58% of US community hospitals are non-profit, 21% are government owned, and 21% are for-profit.^[2] According to the World Health Organization (WHO), the United States spent more on health care per capita ($8,608), and more on health care as percentage of its GDP (17.2%), than any other nation in 2011. 64.3% of which was paid for by the government in 2013.^{[3][4]}⁹

So the overwhelmingly obvious answer to the WtF? question is this:

Privately-owned healthcare providers, privately owned healthcare insurance companies, and rich doctors in the USA are making out like bandits and don't give a damn about us.

Wait! I think I hear the phrase “American exceptionalism” springing to many lips.

But, please don't give me that bullshit:

American exceptionalism as applied to healthcare (or anything else) is nothing but a self-serving cognitive illusion for fat cats, and everyone who isn't in the grip of a cognitive illusion knows it.

Now as I have pointed out twice already, President-Elect Trump, who received 46.3% of the popular vote, is a billionaire—a greedy, ruthless, nativist, bigoted, demagogue billionaire.

⁸ Wikipedia, “Health Care in the United States.”

⁹ Wikipedia, “Health Care in the United States.”

Do you really think that, over the next 4 or 8 years, he and all the other rich people in the Trump governing elite are even going to attempt to fix healthcare hell in the USA?

Yet again, hell no. Of course not.

Even Obamacare, which, sadly, is nothing but a pathetic band-aid for a gushing national wound, is going to be repealed by the Trump administration and governing elite as soon they take power, and then, strategically, dismantled after the mid-term elections.

So, for as long as Trump is POTUS and nothing is done to fix healthcare hell, unless you're rich or have a high-income job, well above the median yearly household income of $56,516 USD (according to the US Census Bureau Report on Income and Poverty in the USA for 2015), we're screwed.

Universal Basic Income, a Fifteen-Hour Workweek for Understaffed Non-Bullshit Jobs, Eco-Jobs, and Universal Free Healthcare

According to my Universal Basic Income (UBI) proposal:

- Anyone 21 years of age or over who has a personal yearly income of $50,000 USD or less, and is capable of requesting their UBI, would receive $25,000 USD per year, with no strings attached.

Moreover, over and above UBI, I am also proposing a 15-Hour Workweek for Understaffed Non-Bullshit Jobs (FHW-for-UNBJs), which says:

- Anyone 18 years of age or older who is living permanently in the USA, who has completed a high school education, and is mentally and physically capable of doing a job, would be offered an eco-job, paying a yearly wage of $25,000.00 USD, for fifteen hours of work (three 5-hour days) per week.

So anyone 21 years of age or older with a high-school degree and who is also mentally and physically capable of working, would have a guaranteed yearly income of at least $50,000 USD if they chose to do an eco-job.

Now what about healthcare? According to my Universal Free Healthcare (UFH) proposal:

- Every human person living permanently in the USA will receive free lifelong healthcare.

Two Decisive Reasons for Implementing UFH, Together With UBI and FHW-for-UNBJs/Eco-Jobs

First, although it is true that, under the system of UBI together with eco-jobs, no one would ever suffer from poverty or economic oppression again, and also no one who is capable of working and who wants to work would ever be unemployed again, nevertheless, if UFH were not implemented starting in 2021, then most people living permanently in the USA would still suffer from healthcare hell.

Second, under the collective system of UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, and UFH, not only would no one ever suffer from poverty or economic oppression again, and also no one who is capable of working and who wants to work ever be unemployed again, forever, but also healthcare hell in the USA would be ended forever.

VI. Cultural Conflict, Closed Borders, 2-Phase Universal Open Borders, and Empathy Politics

“Okay,” [Rick] said, nodding. “Now consider this. You’re reading a novel written in the old days before the war. The characters are visiting Fisherman’s Wharf in San Francisco. They become hungry and enter a seafood restaurant. One of them orders lobster, and the chef drops the lobster into the tub of boiling water while the characters watch.”¹⁰

Tyrell: “Is this to be an empathy test? Capillary dilation of the so-called blush response? Fluctuation of the pupil. Involuntary dilation of the iris...”

Deckard: “We call it Voight-Kampff for short.”¹¹

Cultural Conflict and Identity Politics

By cultural conflict I mean the mutual antagonism that arises between groups of people with different skin color, different languages, different ethnicity, different religions or religious traditions, different gender, different sexuality, different age groups or generations, different social castes, different economic classes, different political parties, and so-on, or who simply live in different places from one another.

Such conflict ranges all the way from mutual distrust and insults, to mutual coercion including threats of violence or actual violence, to systematic mutual or one-way persecution including imprisonment, torture, and murder, to war, “ethnic cleansing,” mass murder, or genocide.

¹¹ Blade Runner, directed by R. Scott, 1982.

The very idea of cultural conflict, in any one of its instances, implies the existence of a centered group, Us, that is the agent and first participant in a given cultural conflict, and an external group, or set of groups, that is the target and second participant in that conflict, Them.

Let’s call the agent-group, Our People, and the target-group or set of groups, Other People.

To the extent that Our People have Our own (relatively) unique political practices and policies, that set Us apart from Them, the Other People, these practices and policies jointly constitute an identity politics.

Identity Politics of the Right, Identity Politics of the Left, and Trump’s Political Meat-and-Potatoes

Now The Age of Trump is going to last at least 4 years, perhaps 8 years.

Throughout the 2016 Presidential election campaign and especially since Trump’s election, the following highly disturbing cultural and and social fact has become vividly manifest.

On the one hand, we find President-Elect Trump’s Republican, nativist, racist, anti-feminist, right-neoliberal, Know-Nothings, unified by their identity-politics.

And on the other hand, we find President-Reject Hillary Clinton’s Democratic, anti-nativist, anti-racist, pro-feminist, left-liberal, Social Justice Warriors, unified by their identity-politics.

Indeed, the 2016 USA Presidential election was, at bottom, all about cultural conflict, as Mark Lilla’s controversial recent op-ed piece in the New York Times (18 November 2016) “The End of Identity Liberalism,” clearly shows.

Trump’s Know-Nothings fear and hate foreigners, people with different skin color, people with different languages, people with different ethnicity, people with different religions or religious traditions, and people with different sexuality, and above all, they fear and hate Clinton’s Social Justice Warriors.

And, in return, above all, Clinton's Social Justice Warriors fear and hate Trump's Know-Nothings.

In short, there is fear and hatred everywhere in the USA, cultural conflict everywhere, and it is all fundamentally driven by identity politics, whether of the right or the left.

As I have pointed out three times already, President-Elect Trump, who received 46.3% of the popular vote, is a billionaire—a greedy, ruthless, nativist, bigoted, demagogue billionaire.

Do you really think that, over the next 4 or 8 years, he and all the other rich people in the Trump governing elite are even going to attempt to fix cultural conflict in the USA?

Yet again, with feeling: hell no. Of course not.

Trump, his governing elite, the Republican Party, and the alt-right zealots desperately need cultural conflict in order to unify the Know-Nothings by means of identity politics: it's their political meat-and-potatoes.

So, for as long as Trump is POTUS and nothing is done to fix cultural conflict in the USA, we're all screwed.

Universal Open Borders, in 2 Phases, as the Surprising Solution to the Problem of Cultural Conflict

According to my Universal Basic Income (UBI) proposal:

- Anyone 21 years of age or over and living permanently in the USA, who has a personal yearly income of $50,000 USD or less, and who is capable of requesting their UBI, would receive $25,000 USD per year, with no strings attached.

Over and above UBI, I am also proposing a 15-Hour Workweek for Understaffed Non-Bullshit Jobs (FHW-for-UNBJs), which says:

- Anyone 18 years of age or older who is living permanently in the USA, who has completed a high school education, and is mentally and physically capable of doing a job, would be offered an eco-job, paying a yearly wage of $25,000.00 USD, for fifteen hours of work (three 5-hour days) per week.

So anyone 21 years of age or older with a high-school degree and who is also mentally and physically capable of working, would have a guaranteed yearly income of at least $50,000 USD if they chose to do an eco-job.

And in addition to UBI and FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, I am also proposing Universal Free Healthcare (UFH), which says:

- Every human person living permanently in the USA will receive free lifelong healthcare.

Moreover, I am also proposing 2-Phase Universal Open Borders (2P-UOB):

- Phase 1: Starting in 2021, there will be universal open borders with Canada and Mexico, and everyone who moves across those borders and then claims residence in the USA, will receive temporary or permanent residence in the USA and also full membership in the system of UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, and UFH in the USA, with the precise number of new temporary or permanent residents to depend on the current availability of (i) adequate funding for UBI, eco-jobs, and UFH, and (ii) adequate living accommodation, in the USA, provided that all new residents also fully respect the human dignity of everyone else in the USA and elsewhere in the world.
- Phase 2: Also starting in 2021, the USA, Canada, and Mexico will collectively form a Global Refugee Consortium (GRC), with three-way open borders to any political refugee, economic refugee, or asylum seeker from anywhere in the world (aka "global refugees"), who will receive temporary or permanent residence in the USA, Canada, or Mexico, and also full membership in the system of UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, and UFH in the three GRC countries, with the precise number of new temporary or permanent residents, and the precise distribution of new residents among the three members of the GRC, to depend on the current availability of (i) funding for UBI, eco-jobs, and UFH, and (ii) adequate living accommodation, in the three GRC countries, provided that all new residents also fully respect the human dignity of everyone else in the GRC and elsewhere in the world.

It is crucial to note that Phase 2 of 2P-UOB, and the corresponding creation of the GRC, presuppose that USA, Canada, and Mexico, by 2021, will have each implemented social systems equivalent to UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, and UFH.

An Obvious Objection and My Reply

Here is an obvious objection to 2P-UOB, which I will call The Inevitability of Cultural Conflict:

Since people are by nature egoistic and mutually antagonistic, then whenever they group together and become an Us, they will naturally and inevitably engage in cultural conflict with Them, the Other People. So universal open borders with Canada and Mexico, or to global refugees, will never work, precisely because they would inevitably lead to even more and greater cultural conflicts than already exist, and perhaps even lead to war. Therefore, the USA should always have (more or less) closed borders to everyone, forever.

And here is my reply to that objection.

Obviously, cultural conflict exists, and has existed in varying degrees, from minor, to moderate, to major, to intense, all the way to catastrophic, near-satanically evil, holocaust levels, as long as real human persons have existed.

Nevertheless, not only is it simply false that people are by nature, or even inevitably by culture, egoistic or self-interested and mutually antagonistic, but also the very belief that people are, as widespread as it may be, is nothing more and nothing less than a self-serving cognitive illusion that directly serves the interests of Trump and his governing elite.

In other words, Trump and his governing elite desperately need you to believe in The Inevitability of Cultural Conflict and closed borders, precisely because it's their political meat-and-potatoes.

It is self-evident that people are most inclined to cultural conflict with others, via their identity politics, when they're already very angry, anxious, bitter, or frightened about other things, for whatever reasons — e.g. poverty and economic oppression, being unemployed or having to do a shit job, or healthcare hell — and then they project those powerful negative emotions onto Other People.

In so doing, Our People thereby cognitively demonize and stigmatize the Other People, then actively fear and hate the Other People, or even, in the most extreme cases, cognitively de-humanize the Other People, by seeing them as wild beasts or vermin, or even as human garbage or human offal, fit only to be eliminated and exterminated.

Nevertheless, these are all strictly extreme, pathological situations, and almost infinitely far from being the normal situation between different cultural groups.

Of course, there are always some difficulties and tensions.

Consider, e.g., the most obvious cases of all, men and women, or older people and younger people.

Nevertheless, it is not all uncommon for sharply different cultural groups, even a multiplicity of sharply different cultural groups, to get along just fine, all things considered, to their great mutual benefit, with only the ordinary sorts of “human, all too human” problems, whenever the larger economic, social, and political backgrounds are appropriately supportive.

Real-world examples of this abound: happy marriages and other intimate partnerships, happy families, good camaraderie and friendships across even sharply different cultural groups, good working relationships across even sharply different cultural groups, etc., etc.

Indeed, the city of Toronto, Canada, is an excellent real-world example of all of this.

I am not saying that people are perfect in Toronto or anywhere else: infinitely far from it!

But the essential point is that people of even sharply different cultural groups CAN and often DO get along pretty well, given the right background-setting of economic, social, and political support, e.g., Toronto.

The amazing thing, then, is how often we forget or overlook this absolutely self-evident fact.

Therefore, the very best thing that could possibly be done in the face of cultural conflict in the USA is to create a two-phase UOB situation in which

- everyone in the USA, Canada, and Mexico is moving freely across borders between the three countries and living wherever they want to,
- global refugees are given universal safe-haven in the Global Refugee Consortium (GRC) consisting of the USA, Canada, and Mexico, and therefore
- people from all over the USA, Canada, Mexico, and global refugees from the rest of the world, can thereby all actually see each other, hear each other, and interact as neighbors, without wire fences, walls, or fear of any sort of persecution or violence,

- so that everyone is committed to universal respect for human dignity, and also has a universal basic income, a 15-hour workweek for non-bullshit jobs/eco-jobs, and universal free healthcare.

Thus the surprising solution to the problem of cultural conflict in the USA is

- universal open borders with Canada and Mexico (UOB phase 1), and
- universal open borders to global refugees, via the GRC consisting of the USA, Canada, and Mexico (UOB phase 2), with both of these
- only in the context of the appropriately supportive economic, social, and political background of UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, and UFH.

Closed borders are therefore not only not a reasonable response to the problem of cultural conflict, they're one of the basic causes of cultural conflict itself.

Empathy Politics, Not Identity Politics

In Philip K. Dick's brilliant classic science-fiction novel, Do Androids Dream of Electric Sheep?, and again in Ridley Scott's equally brilliant classic science-fiction film Blade Runner, it is philosophically highly insightful and significant that the Voight-Kampff test for telling human persons apart from "replicants" or androids, is an empathy test.

Indeed, the psychological capacity for empathy is an essential capacity of all human persons.¹²

In turn, the key to understanding my surprising solution to the problem of cultural conflict, namely 2P-UOB, is what I call empathy politics, which is the diametric opposite of identity politics.

Frequently it is said that the alternative to the corrosive influence of identity politics, which emphasizes difference, exclusion, and exceptionalism, is a politics of commonality or universality, and shared interests and values.

That is true, but still too superficial.

¹² See, e.g., Mr Nemo and M. Maiese, Embodied Minds in Action (Oxford: Oxford Univ. Press, 2009); and M. Maiese, Embodiment, Emotion, and Cognition (London: Palgrave Macmillan, 2011).

What lies at the ground of a politics of commonality and universality is respect for human dignity.

In turn, what evokes and sustains respect for human dignity is the emotion of empathy: the ability to mirror the feelings and emotions of other people inside oneself.

This doesn't mean that you have to agree with other people, or even to like other people, particularly: all you have to do is to be able to understand their feelings and emotions, and to respect them.

Empathy is inherently outward-looking, not inward-looking, self-absorbed, navel-gazing, or narcissistic.

Empathetic people are naturally inclined towards generosity, graciousness, kindness, and tolerance, and, at a minimum, towards politeness, and not towards arrogance, callousness, cruelty, rudeness, or intolerance.

Creating and cultivating personal and cultural practices of empathy are therefore the moral and political antidote to the morally and politically poisonous and pathological influence of identity politics.

Q: What do I mean by practices of empathy?

A: There are obviously many different ways of opening yourself to other minds, other languages, other nations, other traditions, and other ways of living and being human: studying their history, reading their literature, watching their movies, etc., etc.

But above all, what I mean is that we should all engage in frequent domestic and foreign travel, including actually living in many different places, all over the USA, Canada, Mexico, and the rest of the world.

That way, once all sorts of different people are actually our next door neighbors, then we will naturally and inevitably see how ordinary everyone really is, everywhere, hence we will all be able to empathize with them and respect them as human persons with dignity, just like us.

But in order to make frequent domestic and foreign travel, and living in different places, all over the USA, Canada, Mexico, and the rest of the world really possible for most people, we need the two-phase UOB system, together with UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, and UFH.

Two Decisive Reasons for Implementing 2P-UOB Together With UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/Eco-Jobs, and UFH

First, although it is true that, under the system of UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, and UFH, no one would ever suffer from poverty or economic oppression again, no one who is capable of working and who wants to work would ever be unemployed again, and no one would ever suffer from healthcare hell again, nevertheless, if two-phase UOB were not implemented starting in 2021, then most people living permanently in the USA would still suffer from cultural conflict and the pathology of closed borders.

Second, under the collective system of UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs, eco-jobs, UFH, and two-phase UOB, not only would no one ever suffer from poverty or economic oppression again, not only would no one who is capable of working and who wants to work ever be unemployed again, forever, and not only would healthcare hell in the USA would be ended forever, but also cultural conflict in the USA and the pathology of closed borders would be ended forever.

VII. Gun Violence and Universal No-Guns

Guns R Us

President-Elect Trump is adamantly and explicitly pro-gun and pro-Second Amendment.

But, guess what folks?

Gun violence results in thousands of deaths and injuries in the United States annually.^[1] According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, in 2013, there were 73,505 nonfatal firearm injuries (23.23 per 100,000 U.S. citizens);^[2] 11,208 homicides (3.5 per 100,000);^[3] 21,175 suicides;^[4] 505 deaths due to accidental/negligent discharge of a firearm; and 281 deaths due to firearms-use with “undetermined intent”,^[4] included in a total of 33,636 deaths due to “Injury by firearms”,^[4] or 10.6 deaths per 100,000 people.^[4] Of the 2,596,993 total deaths in the US in 2013, 1.3% were related to firearms.^{[1][5]} The ownership and control of guns are among the most widely debated issues in the country.

In 2010, according to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, 67% of all homicides in the U.S. were committed using a firearm.^[6] According to the FBI, in 2012, there were 8,855 total firearm-related homicides in the US, with 6,371 of those attributed to handguns.^[7] In 2012, 64% of all gun-related deaths in the U.S. were suicides.^[8] In 2010, there were 19,392 firearm-related suicides, and 11,078 firearm-related homicides in the U.S.^[9] In 2010, 358 murders were reported involving a rifle while 6,009 were reported involving a handgun; another 1,939 were reported with an unspecified type of firearm.^[10]

Firearms were used to kill 13,286 people in the U.S. in 2015, excluding suicide.^[11] Approximately 1.4 million people have been killed using firearms in the U.S. between 1968 and 2011.^[11]

In 2010, gun violence cost U.S. taxpayers approximately $516 million in direct hospital costs.^[12]

Gun violence is most common in poor urban areas and frequently associated with gang violence, often involving male juveniles or young adult males.^{[13][14]} Although mass shootings have been covered extensively in the media, mass shootings account for a small fraction of gun-related deaths^[15] and the frequency of these events steadily declined between 1994 and 2007, rising between 2007 and 2013.^{[16][17]¹³}

The gun and ammunition industry in the USA is BIG business, with an annual revenue of \$13.5 billion USD.

So, given the fact that President-Elect Trump, who received 46.3% of the popular vote, is a billionaire—a greedy, ruthless, nativist, bigoted, demagogue billionaire, do you really think that, over the next 4 or 8 years, Trump and all the other rich people in the Trump governing elite are even going to attempt to fix the problem of gun violence in the USA?

What's that you're saying?

Hell no! Of course not.

So, for as long as Trump is POTUS and nothing is done to fix the problem of gun violence in the USA we're all constantly at risk of being coerced or killed by guns.

Against Guns

I'm now going to argue that

- not only (i) owning or possessing and using guns, but also (ii) the Second Amendment, are both rationally unjustified and immoral.

In order to do that, however, and for clarity's sake, I'll quickly introduce some terminology.

By coercion I mean:

- either (i) using violence (e.g. injuring, torturing, or killing) or the threat of violence, in order to manipulate people according to certain purposes of the coercer (primary coercion), or (ii) inflicting appreciable, salient harm (e.g. imprisonment, termination of employment, large monetary penalties) or deploying the threat of appreciable, salient harm, even if these are not in themselves violent, in order to manipulate people according to certain purposes of the coercer (secondary coercion).

So all coercion is manipulation.

Therefore, whether it is primary or secondary, coercion should be carefully distinguished from what I will call minimal sufficiently effective, last resort, defensive, protective, and preventive moral force:

- as a last resort, only either using the smallest sufficiently effective level of violence or threat of violence, or deploying the smallest sufficiently effective threat of appreciable, salient harm, in order to defend against, protect against, or prevent, oneself or someone else being primarily or secondarily coerced, or having their rational human dignity directly violated.

All human persons, aka people, are

- absolutely intrinsically, non-denumerably infinitely valuable, beyond all possible economics, which means they have dignity, and (ii) autonomous rational animals, which means they can act freely for good reasons, and above all they are (iii) morally obligated to respect each other and to be actively concerned for each other's well-being and happiness, as well as their own well-being and happiness.

Therefore it is rationally unjustified and immoral to undermine or violate people's dignity, under any circumstances.

People have dignity as an innate endowment of their rational humanity.

Dignity is neither a politically-created right, nor an achievement of any sort.

Nor can anyone lose their dignity by thinking, choosing, or acting in a very morally or legally bad way.

The primary function of guns is for their owners/possessors or users to manipulate, threaten, or kill other people for reasons of their own, namely, coercion.

That coercion really and truly is the primary function of guns, is clearly proven by the history of firearms.

Indeed, that coercion really and truly is the primary function of guns is even explicitly stated by the history of guns provided by the American Firearms Institute, who of course would be exceptionally unwilling to admit anything they thought would be somehow prejudicial to the pro-gun, pro-Second Amendment movement.

Notice that I said that the primary function of guns is coercion.

Please do not let the fact that guns can have secondary or tertiary functions, say, for hunting non-human animals, or for recreational shooting, or for holding doors closed on windy days, conceptually confuse you.

Notice too, that if it turns out that owning/possessing and using guns according to their primary function is rationally unjustified and immoral, then owning/possessing and using guns according to their secondary and tertiary functions will be equally rationally unjustified and immoral.

If it is rationally unjustified and immoral for you to own/possess and use a bomb that would blow up the Earth, then it is equally rationally unjustified and immoral for you to own/possess and use that bomb for hunting non-human animals, for recreational bombing, or for holding doors closed on windy days.

Now arbitrarily coercing other people is rationally unjustified and immoral because it undermines and violates their dignity.

Notice that I said "arbitrarily coercing other people."

That means manipulating, threatening, or killing other people

- either (i) for no good reason or
- (ii) for no reason at all, much less a good reason.

"For no good reason" does not imply that there could be a good reason for coercion: all manipulation is inherently bad.

People who act coercively either have bad motivating reasons for so acting (e.g., selfishness), or simply coerce without a reason, in a spontaneously bad way.

And please do not let the fact that in some circumstances minimal sufficiently effective, last-resort, defensive, protective, and preventive moral force is rationally justified and morally permissible, conceptually confuse you.

Therefore, since it fully permits arbitrary coercion, owning/possessing and using guns is rationally unjustified and immoral, other things being equal.

Notice, again, that I said other things being equal.

Please do not let the fact that under some special critical (in the sense of “involving a crisis”) conditions, when other things are not equal, when all else has failed, and when the only way to stop someone doing something horrendously immoral, and in direct violation of human dignity — e.g., rape, torture, murder, mass murder, genocide — to you, to someone else, or to many other people, that it is rationally justified and morally permissible to use a gun for the purposes of minimal sufficiently effective, last-resort, defensive, protective, and preventive moral force against that evil person, conceptually confuse you.

No one may permissibly own or possess a gun, but sometimes, under some special critical conditions, it is morally permissible to use one.

But this permissible use is only for last-resort, defensive, preventive, and protective purposes: it is never morally permissible to use a gun for coercion.

One very important moral and political consequence of the preceding argument is its direct bearing on the Second Amendment to the US Constitution, which says this:

A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed.

In other words, focusing on the material in boldface, the Second Amendment says that “the people,” i.e., all Americans, have the moral and legal right “to keep and bear arms,” i.e., the moral and legal right to own/possess and use guns, unconditionally.

This means that the Second Amendment fully morally and legally permits arbitrary coercion.

The further historical question of whether the original intention of the Second Amendment was to establish a legal right to own/possess and use guns for militias only, or for all Americans, is irrelevant.

But arbitrary coercion is rationally unjustified and immoral.

Therefore the Second Amendment is rationally unjustified and immoral.

More generally, no one, which includes all Americans, and which especially includes all members of the police and the army, i.e., the “Militia,” has the moral right “to keep and bear arms,” i.e., to own/possess and use guns, other things being equal.

Universal Basic Income, 15-Hour Workweek for Understaffed Non-Bullshit Jobs, Eco-Jobs, Universal Free Healthcare, 2-Phase Universal Open Borders, and Universal No-Guns

According to my Universal Basic Income (UBI) proposal:

- Anyone 21 years of age or over and living permanently in the USA, who has a personal yearly income of $50,000 USD or less, and who is capable of requesting their UBI, would receive $25,000 USD per year, with no strings attached.

Over and above UBI, I am also proposing a 15-Hour Workweek for Understaffed Non-Bullshit Jobs (FHW-for-UNBJs), which says:

- Anyone 18 years of age or older who is living permanently in the USA, who has completed a high school education, and is mentally and physically capable of doing a job, would be offered an eco-job, paying a yearly wage of $25,000.00 USD, for fifteen hours of work (three 5-hour days) per week.

So anyone 21 years of age or older with a high-school degree and who is also mentally and physically capable of working, would have a guaranteed yearly income of at least $50,000 USD if they chose to do an eco-job.

In addition to UBI and FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, I am also proposing Universal Free Healthcare (UFH), which says:

- Every human person living permanently in the USA will receive free lifelong healthcare.

And I am also proposing 2-Phase Universal Open Borders (2P-UOB):

- Phase 1: Starting in 2021, there will be universal open borders with Canada and Mexico, and everyone who moves across those borders and then claims residence in the USA, will receive temporary or permanent residence in the USA and also full membership in the system of UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, and UFH in the USA, with the precise number of new temporary or permanent residents to depend on the current availability of (i) adequate funding for UBI, eco-jobs, and UFH, and (ii) adequate living accommodation, in the USA, provided that all new residents also fully respect the human dignity of everyone else in the USA and elsewhere in the world.

Phase 2: Also starting in 2021, the USA, Canada, and Mexico will collectively form a Global Refugee Consortium (GRC), with three-way open borders to any political refugee, economic refugee, or asylum seeker from anywhere in the world (aka “global refugees”), who will receive temporary or permanent residence in the USA, Canada, or Mexico, and also full membership in the system of UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/eco-jobs, and UFH in the three GRC countries, with the precise number of new temporary or permanent residents, and the precise distribution of new residents among the three members of the GRC, to depend on the current availability of (i) funding for UBI, eco-jobs, and UFH, and (ii) adequate living accommodation, in the three GRC countries, provided that all new residents also fully respect the human dignity of everyone else in the GRC and elsewhere in the world.

Finally, I am also proposing Universal No-Guns (UNG), which says:

- No one in the USA, including police, internal security forces of all kinds, armies, and intelligence forces of all kinds, has the moral right to possess or use guns of any kind, for any purpose whatsoever, because the primary function of guns is coercion, and coercion is immoral.
- UNG would be implemented by repealing the Second Amendment to the US Constitution in 2021 and then universally banning the possession or use of guns thereafter.

Many countries already seriously restrict the possession and use of guns, with significant benefits for all involved; therefore UNG would radically extend and increase those benefits.

It is of course obvious that UNG would have to be implemented in very carefully-designed stages, so as to ensure a non-violent, safe transition from gun-free sub-zone1 to gun-free sub-zone2, etc.

Whenever I describe the very idea of UNG to American acquaintances and friends—including the most thoughtful, open-minded, left-leaning, or politically radical among them—they initially or typically get a wide-eyed, horrified look on their faces, shake their heads convulsively, and say that repealing the Second Amendment is “impossible.”

As they do this, I'm vividly reminded of the mind-controlled characters in The Manchurian Candidate who, when questioned, automatically intone that "Raymond Shaw is the kindest, bravest, warmest, most wonderful human being I've ever known in my life," even when they know in their hearts that this is completely false.

So it is important to point out explicitly what every American already knows in their hearts, namely, that there is a perfectly clear and effective democratic procedure for repealing Constitutional Amendments; and that other Amendments have actually been repealed: so in that sense, repealing the Second Amendment is actually easy and not in any way "impossible."

The people of the USA created and instituted the Second Amendment; and the repeal process is written into the Constitution itself; therefore, the people of the USA can repeal the Second Amendment.

I know full well that pro-gun, pro-Second Amendment people are very apt to fulminate against those who disagree with them, in an attempt to silence the anti-gun "public enemies," even to the point of threatening to shoot them, or actually shooting them.

But that these pro-gun, pro-Second-Amendment people would be willing to shoot people for disagreeing with them and rationally defending the contrary, in view of the First Amendment, which politically protects freedom of expression, only provides a further self-evident proof of the political goodness and rightness of UNG.

Two Decisive Reasons for Implementing UNG Together With UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs/Eco-Jobs, UFH, and 2-Phase UOB

First, although it is true that, under the system of UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs, eco-jobs, UFH, and two-phase UOB, no one would ever suffer from poverty or economic oppression again, no one who is capable of working and who wants to work would ever be unemployed again, no one would ever suffer from healthcare hell again, and no one would ever suffer from cultural conflict and the pathology of closed borders again, nevertheless, if UNG were not implemented starting in 2021, then everyone living permanently in the USA would still be constantly at risk of being coerced or killed by guns.

Second, under the collective system of UBI, FHW-for-UNBJS, eco-jobs, UFH, two-phase UOB, and UNG, not only would no one ever suffer from poverty or economic oppression again, not only would no one who is capable of working and who wants to work ever be unemployed again, forever, not only would healthcare hell in the USA be ended forever, and not only would cultural conflict and the pathology of closed borders in the USA be ended forever, but also gun violence in the USA would be ended forever.

VIII. Nothing Will Be Left Unaffected: Marriage Reform

It is more than merely reasonable to think that implementing the five-part Utopia Now package will not leave any other important social facts unaffected.

A leading example is marriage.

Under Utopia Now, it would be highly reasonable to conceive of marriage as strictly a consensual moral bond for interpersonal mutual love and mutual caring, including natural or adopted children, with minimal legal requirements and implications.

Anyone 18 years of age or over who is capable of consenting would be able to marry anyone else just by mutually consenting.

Polygamy would be legalized: hence marriage could involve any number of people, provided they were all 18 years of age or older and mutually consented.

Divorce, in turn, would be declarative and unilateral: hence anyone who is capable of making a divorce declaration would be able to divorce any or all their spouses just by officially stating this.

Care of children of marriages ended by divorce would be arranged by mutual or mediated negotiation.

IX. Real-World Spirituality and *Utopia Now*¹⁴

A great many objections will be raised against Utopia Now; and it is also fully conceivable that attempts will be made to coerce and silence its proponents.

Q: How can we respond to this?

A: By means of what I call real-world spirituality and real, serious philosophy

According to Wikipedia,

Millennials (also known as the Millennial Generation or Generation Y, abbreviated to Gen Y) are the demographic cohort between Generation X and Generation Z. There are no precise dates for when the generation starts and ends. Demographers and researchers typically use the early ¹⁴ I'm very grateful to Andrew Chapman and Addison Ellis for their help with this section.

1980s as starting birth years and use the mid-1990s to the early 2000s as final birth years for the Millennial Generation.

As a recent (May 2015) New York Times article, “Human Contact in the Digital Age,” correctly points out, many Millennials are seriously involved in a search for some sort of spirituality without traditional organized religion (aka without church) plus or minus God (aka +/- God).

For convenience, I will call this spirituality without church +/- God, real-world spirituality.

Most people alive today are Baby Boomers, Gen X-ers, Millennials, or Gen Z-ers.

I myself am a Boomer, and, like so many other of my contemporaries in the four post-World War II generations, I do indeed care deeply about the issues, questions, and problems of real-world spirituality discussed in that NY Times article.

But I am also someone who is pursuing real, serious philosophy as a full-time, lifetime calling.

And as such, I have been trying to work out a way for contemporary philosophers to think about real-world spirituality, after I came to the sad conclusion that, by and large, contemporary professional academic philosophers do not care at all about real-world spirituality, in that they arrogantly ignore it in their professional research and almost never publicly even say anything about it, except to sneer at it.

They Scholastically fuss about abstract theology, proofs for the existence of God, moral theology, the problem of evil, theism vs. atheism — yes.

But they arrogantly ignore or sneer at the religious issues that so many real people really care about.

It is yet another clear and distinct indicator of the poverty of contemporary professional academic philosophy.

So I am going to have to dare to think and speak for myself about real-world spirituality.

It is evident in our daily interpersonal dealings – moral, practical, romantic, or work-related – that all people care very seriously about human dignity.

Caring for human dignity, or simply humanity, is not only an other-regarding attitude, but a deeply personal and inward attitude.

That is, we experience ourselves as having dignity, a quality irreducible to any process of number-crunching, calculation, or instrumentalization.

To instrumentalize humanity is to turn creatures with human dignity into mere means to some other end; or, to use them as mere things.

Thus, we are not simply calculating and calculable objects of the world; we are beings who care.

In the modern European philosophical tradition, we find similar notions at work in, e.g., Kant (“respect for human beings as ends-in-themselves”), Marx (“species-being”), and Heidegger (“care”).

Above all, however, the world’s great religions have all implicitly or explicitly understood this notion.

Nevertheless, it is important to distinguish clearly between the doctrines of religion, on the one hand, and the institutions of religion on the other.

For centuries, the institutions, both because of their sociopolitical omnipresence and because of their monopolies on moral dialogue, were able to exert doctrinal dominance without having to justify their doctrines rationally or even to make these doctrines clear, distinct, and coherent.

Moreover, with the rise of the “demand-for-justification” Enlightenment attitude of the 17th and 18th centuries, and the advent of the “question-all-inherited-authority” post-Enlightenment free-thinking of the 19th and 20th centuries, not only did both religious institutions and religious doctrines for the first time become the sorts of things it made any sense at all to evaluate, but also the sharp distinction between doctrines and institutions of religions was for the first time made evident.

I think that Enlightenment thinking has had two fundamental ideological effects on people.

First, the Enlightenment replaced the religious picture of our place in the world, and of ourselves, with one in which all of reality is composed of physical bits that together compose bigger physical stuff that interacts with other physical stuff via relations of cause and effect.

Everything, including you and me, is the same deep down: it is all just physical bits.

This picture of our place in the world and of the world itself is known as natural mechanism, the position that the natural world is just a giant and complex physical machine that gets from one moment to the next by past states of the machine causing present states of the machine causing future states of the machine.

To understand causes is to understand everything about how we got from earlier to now, and how we will get from now to later. To understand the tiniest physical bits is to understand everything about the ultimate nature of reality and our place in it.

18th century polymath Pierre LaPlace, a well-known steward of “the scientific conception of the world,” gives us a remarkably clear and distinct picture of natural mechanism:

We may regard the present state of the universe as the effect of the past and the cause of the future. An intellect which at any given moment knew all of the forces that animate nature and the mutual positions of the beings that compose it, if this intellect were vast enough to submit the data to analysis, could condense into a single formula the movement of the greatest bodies of the universe and that of the lightest atom; for such an intellect nothing could be uncertain and the future just like the past would be present before its eyes (LaPlace, A Philosophical Essay on Probabilities).

I will call the Enlightenment thesis that natural mechanism is self-evidently true, scientism.

Second, the Enlightenment convinced us that we are all inherently inclined to act first and foremost in our own interests and, often, against the interests of others, either by nature (as in Hobbes) or in our degraded current social condition (as in Rousseau).

Hence we all need to be protected from each other by a social contract that creates a sovereign state authority possessing the power to coerce us in order to obey its commands, whether those commands are moral, that is, consistent with human dignity, or immoral, inconsistent with human dignity.

I will call the Enlightenment thesis that we are essentially self-interested and mutually antagonistic, and therefore need the social contract in order to create a sovereign, coercive state authority in order to pacify us, authoritarianism.

Clearly, scientism and authoritarianism are fully complementary theses: scientism tells us (e.g., by means of social Darwinism, “selfish gene” theory, or neurobiology) that human beings are, essentially, egoistic and warlike; and authoritarianism tells us that because people are essentially egoistic and warlike natural machines, then we can achieve individual or collective satisfaction only if governments have the right to impose commands and laws on us, backed up by force or threats of force, whether or not those commands are morally acceptable.

In other words, the great Leviathan-machine of state authority is urgently required precisely in order to pacify and regulate all the otherwise fractious and unregulated smaller machines, us.

Looked at this way, scientistic authoritarianism is the fundamental existential problem to which so many Boomers, Gen X-ers, Millennials, and Gen Z-ers, are desperately trying to find the solution by means of real-world spirituality—a search for meaning in what so often seems to be a meaningless, cold, and lost world.

In order to solve this existential problem, I believe, real-world spiritual seekers of the post-World War II era need to do two things in order to counteract the two fundamental ideological effects of the Enlightenment.

- First, we need to stop blindly feeling and thinking that nature is inherently deterministic and mechanical. Instead, we must open our minds to the possibility that nature, whether in non-living complex systems or in sentient life and sapient humanity, is shot through with purposive activity.
- Second, and correspondingly, we need to stop blindly feeling and thinking that human nature is fundamentally egoistic and warlike, and that in order to create a better world for ourselves, the only possible solution is to become better-oiled robots of authoritarian states, relentlessly making and spending money, relentlessly acquiring material goods, endlessly amusing ourselves, like a sickness unto death.

When the Boomer generation became disaffected with Soviet-style communism, the “New Left” sprang up—it contained an ideology, a history, an orthodoxy, and an “experiment in living” that reflective young people could either buy into or could define themselves against.

But the post-Boomer generations, it seems, do not have a New Left.

The short-lived Occupy Wall Street movement, by collectivizing people while also fighting against a social order that has allowed the law to classify corporations as people, came close to releasing, at least in Millennials, their latent active altruism and latent passions for mutual aid and resisting human oppression.

But it also tragically confused these with the simple rejection of global corporate capitalism, aka “Wall Street,” while leaving many or even most people’s self-alienating blind faith in scientistic authoritarianism untouched.

What real, serious philosophers, can and should contribute here is the conceptual clarity and sharp focus that non-philosophers so badly need, by looking for ways to convey the revolt against scientistic authoritarianism and the liberation of our better selves, in terms that all contemporary real-world spiritual seekers can immediately grasp and take to heart.

One important clue towards this conceptual clarity and focus, I believe, can be found in a synthesis of what these two very different people, Chris Stedman, the leader of Yale’s Humanist Community, , and Chuck D., the leader of Public Enemy and founding member of Prophets of Rage, are already pursuing separately: humanism and constructive rage.

By “humanism” and “constructive rage,” then, I mean:

- first, “rage against the machine,” clearly understood as rage against scientism,
- second, rage against authoritarianism,
- third, rage against human oppression, and
- fourth and finally, rage for humanity, the idealistic passion for collective altruism and mutual aid.

Can I provide a more concrete illustration of what I mean by all this?

Yes.

Instead of endlessly obsessing about the Punch-and-Judy show that masqueraded as the 2016 US Presidential election, all post-World War II real-world spiritual seekers could be gathering together to talk about humanism, constructive rage, and how to bring about Utopia Now.

Why not do it?

X. Everyday Forms of Resistance

Non-Violent, Active, Public Resistance vs. Everyday Forms of Resistance

Because The Age of Trump is going to last at least 4 years, and perhaps 8 years, this means that for the next 4 or 8 years, things are going to be really, really bad for everyone except Trump, his rich governing elite, the Republican Party, and the alt-right zealots.

By oppression, I mean social or political actions or institutions that violate respect for human dignity by means of coercion, especially violent coercion.

For example, poverty in modern (neo)liberal capitalist democracies like the USA is an oppression, precisely because our collective respect for human dignity

- morally requires that everyone have enough income, and also free access to adequate healthcare, so that they can freely live creative, meaningful, productive, useful lives,
- yet if people living in poverty or on the verge of poverty try to claim the basic income that is owed them simply by virtue of their human dignity, e.g., by stealing it or by engaging in the gangster-economy or underworld-economy of drugs, etc., then not only are they branded as criminals and thieves, and violently coerced by the police, they also fully expose themselves to gun violence.

So how can we resist the coming oppressions of The Age of Trump?

Now resistance to oppression is either violent or non-violent.

Famous examples of violent resistance to oppression include the French Revolution starting in 1789, the European revolutions of 1848, the Mexican Revolution starting in 1910, the Russian Revolution of 1917, the Chinese Revolution of 1949, and hundreds of other revolutionary or at least violently resistant insurgencies in the 20th and 21st century.

Starting with the French Revolution, it is self-evident that violent resistance inevitably turns into counter-oppression and into some or another version of The Terror.

Therefore, only non-violent resistance is morally acceptable.

Obviously, in the USA at least, the classic protest strategies of non-violent, active, public resistance that were deployed during the 1930s IWW (aka “wobblies”) era, the late 1940s/early 50s Hollywood Ten era, the 1960s civil rights/Martin Luther King era, the 1970s Vietnam protest era, the 2010s Occupy Wall Street era, and, most recently, at Standing Rock, are still available to us:

- e.g., unions and strikes, Committees for the First Amendment, boycotts, demonstrations, occupations, sit-ins, walkouts, etc., etc.

But these classic protest strategies, for all their fanfare, noisiness, and media-driven fame or notoriety, are, sadly, usually very fleeting and without any long-term, significant impact — an almost literally Warholian 10 minutes of fame in the newspapers, TV news, online news, or your favorite social media.

Much more seriously, by engaging in classic protests against the coercive, authoritarian powers-that-be — aka sticking it to The Man — you yourself might very well end up being expelled from your high school, college, or university, fired from your job, overtly or subtly blacklisted, imprisoned, or even — as in the IWW strikes, civil rights protests, Kent State, and at Standing Rock — seriously injured, tortured, or dead.

Martin Luther King’s assassination in 1968 is a worldwide emblem of martyrdom resulting from the coercive, authoritarian repression of those who pursue classic protest strategies of non-violent, active, public resistance to oppression.

So if that kind of repression happens to you, as it almost always does to at least some of the resisters, then in the end what almost always happens is this:

- you’re expelled, fired, blacklisted, imprisoned, seriously injured, tortured, or dead, yet everyone else eventually goes back to business-as-usual, oppressing-as-usual, and being-oppressed-as-usual, and nothing really changes.

So it’s not at all unreasonable for you to fear the possibly dire consequences of participating in classic protests whereby you (try to) stick it to The Man — in this case, Trump.

For these reasons, I think it’s high time that we radically re-think our strategies of non-violent resistance, and seriously consider what the Yale political anthropologist James C. Scott, in his brilliant book from the mid-80s, Weapons of the Weak, calls everyday forms of resistance.

In the context of that book, Scott was talking specifically about Malay agrarian peasants in the 1960s and 70s.

But the social and political phenomenon that Scott was studying generalizes to any modern state, especially including contemporary neo-liberal democratic states like the USA, and above all, to The Age of Trump, in which President-Elect Trump, his rich governing elite, the Republican Party, and the alt-right zealots

- will not only be callously indifferent to, but also cynically exploit and directly benefit from, both individually and as a ruling class, widespread human oppression in the USA.

Now, according to Scott, everyday forms of resistance arise from the prosaic but constant struggle between [oppressed people] and those who seek to extract labor, food, taxes, rents, and interest from them. Most of the forms this struggle takes stop well short of collective outright defiance. Here I have in mind the ordinary weapons of relatively powerless groups: foot dragging, dissimulation, false compliance, pilfering, feigned ignorance slander, arson, sabotage, and so forth. These Brechtian forms of class struggle have certain features in common. They require little or no coordination or planning; they often represent a form of individual self-help; and they typically avoid any direct symbolic confrontation with authority or with elite norms.... Everyday forms of resistance make no headlines. Just as millions of anthozoan polyps create, willy-nilly, a coral reef, so thousands of individual acts of insubordination and evasion create a political or economic barrier reef of their own. There is rarely any dramatic confrontation, any moment that is particularly newsworthy. And whenever, to pursue the simile, the ship of state runs aground on such a reef, attention is typically directed to the shipwreck itself and not to the vast aggregation of petty acts that made it possible.¹⁵

Using everyday forms of resistance, we all can be a small but very real part of the giant coral reef on which Trump's coercive, authoritarian, repressive, oppressive ship of state runs aground.

Our Weapons of the Weak

So how can we engage in everyday forms of resistance in The Age of Trump?

In the text I quoted above, Scott lists "the ordinary weapons of relatively powerless groups: foot dragging, dissimulation, false compliance, pilfering, feigned ignorance slander, arson, sabotage, and so forth."

And a few paragraphs earlier, he also mentions "passive noncompliance, subtle sabotage, evasion, and deception" (Weapons of the Weak, p, 31).

¹⁵ J.C. Scott, Weapons of the Weak, pp. 29 and 36, underlining added.

OK. That provides us with some good input.

So, updating “the ordinary weapons of relatively powerless groups” to The Age of Trump, here’s what I’m proposing.

- If you’re in poverty or otherwise economically oppressed, then never envy billionaires or other rich people, and never uncritically believe what they say, because
- 9 times out of ten it’s bullshit, and they’re just trying to screw you.
- If you have a shit job, then do it as badly as you possibly can without being specially noticed or reprimanded by your boss(es) or being fired.
- If you have a shit job, then in your time off, never think about your job but instead always think about the people you love and like, and about the creative, meaningful, productive, useful activities you really care about and enjoy doing, or in any case you would be doing if you could afford to quit your shit job.
- Make edgy, profane fun of Trump at every possible opportunity in anonymous, pseudonymous, or in any case private, unmonitored, electronic-surveillance-protected (e.g., encrypted) blogging, e-mail, texting, online comments, or social media, because
- if anything really funny ever goes viral, then, given Trump’s titanicly inflated ego and narcissism, it will at the very least seriously distract him and perhaps even literally drive him to the point of doing something overtly crazy and unconstitutional for which he can actually be impeached.
- Sign every single petition on Change.org that is directly or indirectly contrary to the moral and social attitudes, moral and social beliefs, political doctrines, and political policies held by Trump, his rich governing, the Republican Party, or the alt-right zealots, because
- this is just like voting against them roughly 300 times a year.
- But more generally, vote against Trump, his rich governing elite, the Republican Party, and the alt-right zealots in every single ballot initiative and election.

- Think lots and lots of angry, radical thoughts against Trump, his rich governing elite, the Republican Party, and the alt-right zealots, and for all the parts of Utopia Now.
- Whenever you're having coffee, drinks, or meals with your good friends or family members, talk lots about all of the parts of Utopia Now.
- Vote for all of the parts of Utopia Now in every single ballot initiative and election.

XI. Singer & Me: Utopia Now versus One World Now

The era that followed the Treaty of Westphalia was the high-water mark of the independent sovereign state. Behind the supposed inviolability of state borders, liberal democratic institutions took hold in some countries, while in others, rulers carried out genocide against their own citizens or permitted their more favored citizens to do it to less favored ones. At intervals, bloody wars broke out between the independent states. Though we may look back on that era with some nostalgia, we should not regret its passing. Instead we should be developing the ethical foundations of the coming era of a single world community.¹⁶

According to the blurb on its copyright page, Peter Singer's One World Now is "a substantially revised version of One World, the first edition of which was published in 2002."

I think that One World Now, both the book and the global ethical and political project described in it, are truly excellent and deeply important; yet also, from an existential Kantian cosmopolitan anarchist point of view, I think that they are ethically, politically, and more generally philosophically, misguided.

Singer's basic eight-part doctrine in One World Now is that

(i) we should adopt a fully global perspective on ethics and politics in order to address the most pressing problems of contemporary humanity, including global climate change, poverty and its consequences, the global crisis of displaced people, and genocide (chs. 1-4),

(ii) where the ethical foundations are specifically act-utilitarian and more generally consequentialist (esp. pp. 178-191) and

¹⁶ P. Singer, One World Now (New Haven, CT: Yale Univ. Press, 2016), p. 224, underlining added.

- (iii) the meta-ethical foundations are provided by non-reductive biological ethical naturalism (esp. pp. 13, and 127-128), and
- (iv) the proposed political system transcends national state sovereignty (esp. chs. 4-5), in order to
- (v) become a single world community (ch. 5, and p. 224), by means of
- (vi) creating a single coercive, interventionist, capitalist, (neo)liberal democratic world-state (pp. 69-70, and chs. 4-5),
- (vii) on a Federalist model (p. 225), that
- (viii) politically supervenes on the United Nations.

More specifically, according to Singer, the United Nations could remain open to all governments, irrespective of their form of government or observance of human rights, but it could replace the present General Assembly with a World Assembly consisting of delegates allocated to its member states in proportion to its population. The United Nations could then supervise democratic elections, in every member country, to elect this delegation. A country that refused to supervise the election of its delegation would have only one delegate, irrespective of its population. That system would provide experience in democracy for the citizens of most countries but would retain the inclusiveness that is an important feature of the United Nations. (pp. 171-172)

I fully agree with (i), (iv), and (v).

And I also quasi-agree with (vii) and (viii), in the sense that I do think that Federalism as a political structure, detached from statism itself, and deployed for specifically existential Kantian cosmopolitan anarchist purposes, can be an effective mechanism for devolving states and state-like institutions towards an ideally post-state world.¹⁷

But I sharply disagree with (ii), (iii), and (vi).

Let me start with (vi).

¹⁷ See Mr Nemo, "Radical Enlightenment: Existential Kantian Cosmopolitan Anarchism, With a Concluding Quasi-Federalist Postscript," in D. Heidemann and K. Stoppenbrink (eds.), Join, Or Die: Philosophical Foundations of Federalism (Berlin: De Gruyter, 2016), pp. 63-90.

If existential Kantian cosmopolitan anarchism is correct, then statism is rationally unjustified and immoral on Kantian ethical grounds, no matter how a government obtains power, including (neo)liberal democratic states.

Therefore, a (neo)liberal democratic world-state is no more rationally justified or morally right than any other kind of state.

The fundamental problem with statism, whether pre-modern tyranny, oligarchy, plutocracy, theocracy, and nation-statism of any sort, including totalitarian or non-totalitarian communism or fascism, or world-statism, lies in its fundamental claim that we have an obligation to heed and obey the commands of governments, regardless of the moral content of those commands, simply because governments possess the coercive power to compel us to accept these commands.

The problem is that the fundamental claim of statism is self-evidently false.

For, just as in Divine Command Ethics, a command is not rationally justified or morally right just because an all-powerful God commands it, so too in statism, a command is not rationally justified or morally right just because a coercive government commands it.

If a command is rationally unjustified and morally wrong, on independent (e.g., Kantian) ethical grounds, then it is rationally unjustified and morally wrong, no matter what God or the government says.

Therefore, statism in general is rationally unjustified and immoral, and more specifically, neoliberal democratic world-statism is also rationally unjustified and immoral.

At one point, Singer even implicitly admits the cogency of this argument, as applied to democracy:

Democracy, in the sense of the rule of the majority, does not guarantee that human rights will be respected. (p. 158)

Here is how the Singerian enthymeme can be filled in.

Since “some degree of democracy” (p. 159), i.e., minimal democracy, is also being used by Singer as the criterion of moral legitimacy for states (pp. 156-159), it follows by Singer’s own admission that no state is morally legitimate simply by virtue of its being democratic in the sense of the rule of the majority, and therefore no state is morally legitimate simply by virtue of its being a state: that is, ethical anarchism is true.

Moreover, in the very next four sentences, without further argument or sign-posting, Singer does an amazing philosophical switcheroo:

But a democratic process requires that the policies of government must be publicly defended and justified. They cannot simply be implemented from above. Although some of us may have the capacity to commit terrible crimes, many of us do have a moral sense, that is, a capacity to reflect on the rights and wrongs of what we are doing and what our rulers are doing. That capacity emerges in the public arena. (p. 158)

This truly is an amazing philosophical switcheroo, by which I mean that it is a straight-up equivocation on the terms "democratic" and "democracy."

In the first sentence, "democratic" and "democracy" mean socio-political facts flowing from the rule of the majority.

In the next four sentences, however, "democratic" and "democracy" mean socio-political facts flowing from publicly open procedures, rational scrutiny, and our individual and collective moral sense.

Let's call this second conception of the democratic and democracy by its historically-accurate name, namely, socio-political facts flowing from enlightenment in the Kantian sense, as classically formulated in Kant's "What is Enlightenment?"

Clearly and distinctly, these two uses of "democratic" and "democracy" are distinct in meaning, not merely by being non-synonymous, but more importantly, by being logically independent of one another.

Flowing from the rule of the majority does not entail flowing from enlightenment in the Kantian sense and flowing from enlightenment in the Kantian sense does not entail flowing from the rule of the majority.

For example, Donald Trump's election as President of the USA in 2016 flows from the rule of the majority in the USA (leaving aside worries about the Electoral College system), but is not enlightened in the Kantian sense.

Conversely, if I am correct, then UBI, FHW-for-UNBJs, eco-jobs, UFH, UOB, and UNG all flow from enlightenment in the Kantian sense, but none of them (as yet) flows from the rule of the majority in the USA.

Therefore, Singer's actual, yet rhetorically-hidden, criterion of moral and political legitimacy is flowing from enlightenment in the Kantian sense, which in turn entails Kantian ethics, which in turn entails Kantian ethical anarchism.¹⁸

This brings me to Singer's (ii) and (iii), namely his normative ethical commitment to act-utilitarianism and consequentialism, and his meta-ethical commitment to non-reductive biological ethical naturalism.

Obviously this is not the place to undertake either full-dress critiques of act-utilitarianism, consequentialism, or non-reductive ethical naturalism or full-dress defenses of existential Kantian ethics, principled non-consequentialism, or ethical anti-naturalism.¹⁹

So instead, I will restrict myself here to pointing up some untoward and seemingly knock-down consequences of Singer's normative ethical and meta-ethical commitments for his global ethics and politics.

Now act-consequentialism in general says that everyone always ought to act in such a way as to bring about good consequences for as many people (or sentient beings) as possible, and act-utilitarianism specifically says that everyone always ought to act in such a way as to bring about pleasant, preference-satisfying, or happiness-producing and/or pain-reducing, preference-frustration-reducing, or unhappiness-reducing consequences for as many people (or sentient beings) as possible.

It is a classical objection to act-consequentialism and act-utilitarianism alike, that acting in strict accordance with them is not only perfectly consistent with, but might even require, a great many human rights violations, right up to genocide and other crimes against humanity.

¹⁸ To be sure, there are some very tricky historical-philosophical issues here about correctly interpreting Kant's official, published political theory in relation to his ethics. But to go into these matters now would only muddy the waters of my argument. Nevertheless, I do address these issues directly in Mr Nemo, "Exiting the State and Debunking the State of Nature: Kant, Ethical Anarchism, and the Political Aesthetics of Resistance," forthcoming in Con-Textos Kantianos.

¹⁹ Nevertheless, for what it's worth, I have attempted both preliminary critiques of act-utilitarianism, consequentialism, and non-reductive ethical naturalism, and also full-dress defenses of existential Kantian ethics, principled non-consequentialism, and ethical anti-naturalism in Kantian Ethics and Human Existence: A Study in Moral Philosophy (Fall/Winter 2016/2017 version), available online at URL = <
https://www.academia.edu/11991023/Kantian_Ethics_and_Human_Existence_A_Study_in_Moral_Philosophy_Fall_Winter_2016_2017_version_comments_welcomed_>.

Therefore, Singer's global ethics and politics, even under conditions of perfect compliance, are not only consistent with but might even require a great many human rights violations, right up to genocide and other crimes against humanity.

To put it bluntly: according to act-consequentialism and act-utilitarianism, if, by "eliminating" 6 million people (i.e., the number of deaths usually attributed to the Nazi Holocaust, including Jews, Roma, and other kinds of people despised by the Nazis), very good consequences could be brought about for, say, 100 million other people, then we are not only morally permitted, but also morally obligated, to commit genocide and other crimes against humanity.

But that is clearly morally unacceptable and also makes a mockery of Singer's explicit strong commitment to preventing genocide and other crimes against humanity in ch. 4.

Finally, what about Singer's non-reductive biological ethical naturalism?

On the face of it, there is something philosophically odd about holding on the one hand, that [the thesis that] a sizable number of human males have the potential to be perpetrators of genocide is, in view of the evidence from ethnology, anthropology, and history, highly plausible (p. 128), presumably because they/we are determined by evolutionary biology to be that way, while also holding, on the other hand, that many of us have a "moral sense" that can counteract this bio-determinism.

Now one way to reconcile these apparently misfitting claims is to hold that

(i) many or most men are biologically determined to selfishness, mutual antagonism, and violence—i.e., they are Hobbesian biochemical puppets, and also that

(ii) some men and almost all women are not so determined but are actually capable of "forming mutually beneficial co-operative relationships" (p. 128), and also possess a "moral sense" upon which they can act—i.e., they are not Hobbesian biochemical puppets, but in fact morally good rational animals.

But this is prima facie absurd, even silly, and in effect reduces to the patently scientific, hyper-sexist, ultra-feminist claim that, by virtue of their nasty biochemical constitution, almost all men are wicked brutes, whereas by virtue of their nice biochemical constitution, almost all women are morally good.

And that's not all.

If non-reductive ethical naturalism is true, then the moral sense is epiphenomenal and has no causal efficacy of its own.

So even those lucky animals who are capable of acting on the dictates of their moral sense, are actually naturally determined and not really free.

Now at this point, we are verging on some very heavy-duty metaphysical issues about freedom vs. natural determinism, incompatibilism vs. compatibilism, and soft determinism vs. (what I call) natural libertarianism, which, obviously again, I cannot discuss further here.²⁰

Nevertheless, it seems very clear that any global ethics and politics grounded on act-consequentialism, act-utilitarianism, non-reductive ethical naturalism, and soft determinism has many prima facie serious problems that are not encountered by a view, like existential Kantian cosmopolitan anarchism, that is grounded on principled non-consequentialism, existential Kantian ethics, ethical anti-naturalism, and natural libertarianism.

Therefore Utopia Now is all-around ethically, politically, and more generally philosophically superior to Singer's One World Now, while also sharing Singer's admirably globalist ethical and political orientation.

XII. Conclusion: Something for Real, Serious Philosophers to Do

In view of Utopia Now, here is what real, serious philosophers can do—

- first, carefully and critically examine every aspect and implication of Utopia Now, then collectively elaborate, refine, and reformulate it accordingly,

²⁰ Nevertheless, as before, for what it's worth, I have attempted to provide a full-dress critique of soft determinism/compatibilism and also a full-dress defence of natural libertarianism, in Mr Nemo, Deep Freedom and Real Persons: A Study in Metaphysics (Fall/Winter 2016/2017 version), available online at URL = <https://www.academia.edu/22215580/Deep_Freedom_and_Real_Persons_A_Study_in_Metaphysics_Fall_Winter_2016_17_version_comments_welcomed_>.

- second, using the collectively elaborated, refined, and reformulated version of Utopia Now, then respond rationally and fully to criticisms of it, whether by philosophers or non-philosophers, and
- third, publicly advocate for Utopia Now, by means of hard-copy or online publications, teaching, public lectures or interviews, blogging, tweeting, texting, etc.

That seems like more than enough to keep all of us very busy for many years to come, in addition to pursuing all the other parts of real, serious philosophy as a full-time, lifetime calling.

So life is short, although real, serious philosophy is long, and utopia can start right now.
